Overview

Panch Pokhari, meaning “Five Lakes,” is a beautiful high-altitude pilgrimage and trekking destination in Sindhupalchok district of Nepal. The area is famous for its five sacred alpine lakes, surrounded by rugged Himalayan landscapes, green hills, and dramatic mountain views. At an elevation of around 4,100 meters, Panch Pokhari is one of Nepal's most scenic and culturally significant trekking destinations.

The lakes hold great religious importance for both Hindu and Buddhist communities and are especially popular during the Janai Purnima festival. The trek offers a peaceful combination of natural beauty, Himalayan scenery, traditional villages, rhododendron forests, mountain trails, and spiritual experiences, making Panch Pokhari an excellent destination for trekkers seeking an off-the-beaten-path adventure.
